Woman Killed When Auto Crashes Into Tree

QUAKERTOWN, June 12.—Mrs. James Flynn, 51, of 6807 Clearview St., Philadelphia, was instantly killed yesterday afternoon when an auto in which she was riding crashed into a tree on Bethlehem Pike, hurling her through the windshield. Other occupants of the car, who escaped with lacerations, were: Mrs. Anna Raynor, 41, of 6812 Clearview street, and her son, Benjamin F. Raynor, 20, driver of the car; Margaret Flynn, 21, daughter of the dead woman, and a 4-year-old child of a neighbor of the Flynn family. All were treated at Quakertown Community Hospital.

According to Raynor, they were driving South on the pike after visiting in Allentown, and in attempting to move the 4-year-old lad from his lap, who was sleeping, to that of Miss Flynn, he lost control. The car was wrecked.

RELIGIOUS SERVICES HELD DURING WAR GAMES

But Gaiety Grasps Men, Too, During Their Off-Duty Hours

HAVE SHOPPING DIST.

This is the second of a series of descriptive articles by an International News Service staff correspondent who was among the select few newspapermen permitted to accompany the United States Fleet in its secret Pacific maneuvers.

By Ralph R. Jordan
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

ABOARD U. S. S. PENNSYLVANIA, WITH U. S. FLEET, June 12.—Barring bad air and rolling ships, bluejackets on the battleships of the Fleet during the Pacific maneuvers have at their command all the advantages of a village shopping district.

Each of the big men-o-war have three stores, the ship's canteen, the ship's service store and the cigar mess. The canteen is run by the Navy department and offers necessities, or at least what sailors regard as necessities—tobacco, matches, shaving and other toilet articles—at cost.

The ship's service store is operated by the ship's company and sells at cost plus 10 per cent. All articles usually found in a small department store, jewelry, clothing, shoes, souvenirs, cameras and even spectacles. The 10 per cent. profit goes into a fund to provide the ship with recreational facilities, movies, baseball, football, basketball and gymnasium equipment. These provide a continuous round of diversion for the men.

The cigar mess is operated by the officers for their convenience and offers at regular prices good cigars, tobacco, fruits and soft drinks.

Profits go to swell the ship's recreational fund.

The soda fountain, in connection with the ship's service store, does a great business in tropical waters. The bluejackets, after a hard day at scrubbing decks or polishing brass under a hot sun, descend on the ice cream and soft drinks with a gusto that would bring tears of envy to a civilian drug store owner.

And there are about 1,200 customers on each battleship. They spend freely—until their money runs out.

Only on Sunday does the off-duty lightheartedness of the fighting men subside.

On a Sabbath a remarkable spirit of reverence sweeps over the Fleet.

Grim and sharp-eyed officers and men who spend the remainder of the week in diligent training for the destruction of an enemy fleet and personnel—should the emergency arise—turn to worship on Sunday with a marked humility and tenderness.

Forgotten are the agents of death which occupy them other days; the big guns, machine guns, torpedoes and bombs.

The fleet, in general, goes to church because, according to Chaplain W. P. Williams, it is manned by a personnel which is always close to death, even in peace time maneuvers. The constant firing practice, flying and high-pressure training takes a toll.

"Men in the fleet," said the chaplain, a lieutenant commander aboard the battleship Pennsylvania, flagship of the fleet, "lead an elemental life which teaches them to strip the sham and hypocrisy from their existence and worship sincerely."

A service by Chaplain Williams on the Pennsylvania was impressive. On deck under the awesome long range guns, with a bright sun beaming on the blue south Pacific, he arranged his blue-flag draped pulpit with a large American flag for his background. In front of him he ranged benches and chairs which were occupied by 300 officers and men who had no duty at the moment.

Up to the mast head ran the church flag, a bugler sounded the church call, through the ship's loud-speaker system came the announcement, "Divine services now will be held and there will be no noise on the ship."

As the great battleship foamed

TAXES

Editorializing on the subject of taxes the Morrisville Herald strikes a responsive chord in the thoughts of sound-minded individuals when it states:

"Careful management of the national government by the Republican Party materially reduced the national debt from the time of the great war until 1931. The State of Pennsylvania for 40 years managed its fiscal affairs in a business-like manner. The County of Bucks and the Borough of Morrisville are doing likewise even until today."

Bristol, the metropolis of Bucks County, can also hold its head high and say: "Our budget balances."

The borough council of Bristol has watched the expenditures here and kept within bounds. If a dollar was not likely to be received it was not spent. To be sure our taxpayers have a desire for many things which have not been provided, just because council has cut its cloth to fit the individual. It has been a wise policy as is now proven and Bristol does not find itself hopelessly in debt and the taxpayers are not confronted with a huge tax burden.

Bristol is provided with most of those facilities which are usually provided by municipalities. We have police and fire protection, garbage and ash collection, pure water at low rates, sewers without a sewer rental, and lighted streets.

The Herald's editorial is herewith given in full: Americans pay four sets of taxes; local, county, state and national.

Careless administration of local and county governments throughout the land during the last fifteen years has jumped their taxes to more than two-thirds of the whole.

Careful management of the national government by the Republican Party materially reduced the national debt from the time of the great war until 1931. The State of Pennsylvania for forty years managed its fiscal affairs in a business-like manner. The County of Bucks and the Borough of Morrisville are doing likewise even until today.

The stupendous expenses of the Federal Government appalls, the theory of recovery is unsound and the purpose is sinister.

The country can thank our forefathers for the system of checks and balances of our government and for a Supreme Court that has done its duty; while we have reason to curse a Congress that had delegated its rights to the Executive.

The sinisterness of the whole set-up is revealed in the attack of Roosevelt upon this great court. We were being eased into a position of helplessness when a dictatorship would have been declared and we would have found ourselves impotent.

It's high time that patriotic citizens awaken to this great danger and repudiate the followers of this sinister group in every local and county election this Fall.

The Administration at Harrisburg sits parrot-like and apes the plans and the ways of Washington, now demanding a full control over legislatures as well as the executive department.

The tax program for Pennsylvania is utterly needless. A proper management of relief, a full demand upon the Federal Government for its fair share of relief moneys and a curtailment of expenses will save the business, the manufacturer and the citizen of Pennsylvania against any of this added burden.

Taxes have never been popular in all history, nor have been those who levied them; yet the Governor talks as if tax levying is a popular thing.

The Republican Party, in spite of the natural errors of administration, has written, since the Civil War, a record unexcelled in all history. It has reason to stand on that record of peace and prosperity.

Three Democratic administrations in that period have a record, two of them academic, of stupendous debt building, progress delaying policies in great contrast to the record of the Republican Party.

We should not forget these facts.

ALLEGED DEFECTS IN BUS EQUIPMENT

Minot J. Hill Says Enemies Are Trying to Put Him Out of Business

SAYS BUSES "UNSAFE"

TRENTON, N. J., June 12.—Defects in the equipment of the Delaware River Coach Company used in bus service between Trenton and Morrisville, and Yardley, were alleged at a hearing yesterday before the Board of Public Utility Commissioners.

Thomas K. Drew, an inspector for the board, declared that violations of safety and mechanical requirements called to the company's attention had not been corrected as late as Monday.

Minot Hill, the company president, alleged that an attempt was being made "to put him out of business" and said that every effort was made to maintain the equipment in proper condition. His charge of unfair tactics brought from Commissioner Hanson a statement that the board was in no way desirous of interfering with the company's operations, but was prepared to insist upon safety requirements.

Hill named Leroy Brown, of the Yardley Road, as unfriendly to his company. Hanson asserted that Brown had no influence with the board and that the case would be determined on its merits. Decision as to the continued operation of the equipment was referred to conference.

Miss Mary Boyle, Philadelphia, spent Sunday with Mrs. Catherine Boyle and family, Bath street.

TO START ENROLLMENT FOR CONSERVATION CORPS

Listing of Those Eligible Will Start June 15th and Extend To August 30th

QUOTA FIXED AT 461

The Summer enrollment of the Civilian Conservation Corps for June 15th to August 31st is about to begin with a quota assigned to this area, consisting of Montgomery and Bucks counties, of 461. This quota is divided among the six Emergency Relief districts according to the proportion of cases getting relief in each.

The following is the number that can go from each of the districts:

District No. 1—(Pottstown) ..... 62
2—(Norristown) ..... 155
3—(Glenside) ..... 73
4—(Ardmore) ..... 36
5—(Doylestown) ..... 43
6—(Bristol) ..... 92

The Emergency Relief staff are now taking applications through their six district offices and their regular visiting staff. The district offices in Bristol are located at 305 Wood street.

All of the boys will be examined and sent off from the Armory at Broad and Callowhill street, Philadelphia.

The following is a list of qualifications for eligibility:

1. All must be on Public Relief Rolls.

2. To be eligible for CCC enrollment a boy must be employable, unmarried, have reached his 18th birthday and not yet reached his 29th birthday, and be able to designate as beneficiary of his monthly allotment a needy dependent by blood or obligation.

3. There shall be no discrimination as to race, color, creed or politics.

4. The prospective selectee must be a citizen by birth, or by complete naturalization. A man who has taken out his first papers is not eligible.

5. Not more than one boy from the same family may be selected for enrollment.

6. None with any criminal record can be sent.

There are separate camps for War Veterans. All veterans who are interested can make application for enrollment at the Veterans Commission, Custom House, 2nd and Chestnut streets, Philadelphia.

When Pennsylvania's complete new basic quota of 44,240 boys are finally enrolled in the Civilian Conservation Corps, over one million dollars a month in cash, or nearly $140,000 every 24 hours, will be paid to dependent families in the State, which will help many of these families to become self-supporting and go off relief, while the boys themselves, besides getting more than $200,000 in cash every month, will be furnished food, clothing and valuable training.

A REAL MIXTURE

(By "The Stroller")

There are many ways of securing transportation to and from your own graduation exercises, but a Bristol Township girl is awarded the current season's prize.

Her parents had arrived home sometime in advance of the young woman who graduated from Bensalem Township high school, the "sweet girl graduate" having acquiesced when a young friend of the opposite sex asked for the honor of escorting her to her home. The parents were awakened from their slumbers by the sound of clanging ice tongs and clattering scales. Somewhat alarmed at the advance of the hours, in case it was time for the morning delivery of ice, the father investigated, but was relieved to find he had many more hours to sleep, as the ice-man boy-friend was merely using his ice truck to take the girl-friend home.

Whether any ice was in the truck to cool the warm heart-beats we have not been able to learn.

Butte, Montana, June 12.—Rumors that William Mahan, 34, sought by police and government agents as a member of the Weyerhaeuser kidnapping gang was under arrest here, persisted today despite repeated denials by authorities.

Newspapermen were satisfied Mahan is not held in the federal building as reported, when they visited a special cell in the U. S. marshal's office, and found it empty.

The "flying squadron" of Montana Highway Patrol was withdrawn from the Butte area yesterday. Federal men continued of dash in and out of Butte checking all possible leads with the co-operation of police and the sheriff.

Deny Mahan's Arrest

DOYLESTOWN, June 12.—With Judge Calvin S. Boyer on the bench, a hearing on a preliminary injunction in the case of the borough of Yardley vs. Frank Milnor Company, of Trenton, N. J., was held Monday afternoon.

Judge Boyer ordered the hearing continued until Wednesday, June 19.

The action grew out of the tearing up of the Pennsylvania-New Jersey Railway Company tracks, located on Main street, in Yardley, and various members of Borough Council testified for the prosecution.

In behalf of borough, represented by Isaac J. VanArtsdalen, Frederick Behington, president of Yardley Borough Council, was the first witness to take the stand.

He testified that the Frank Milnor Company was removing the rails but not repairing the streets. At a meeting of Council, he stated, the defendant was forbidden to remove the rails unless the street was repaired. He explained the defendant's representatives stated they would not be responsible for the cost of replacing the street.

A motion was made and a resolution passed by Council to proceed with an injunction to stop the removal of the tracks, he explained.

Chairman of the Street Committee, David H. Anderson, the second witness, described the condition in which the defendant removed the tracks and left the street. "Some of the ties came up and other remained in the ground," he declared that it was estimated that it would cost $3000 to put the street back into the condition the State demanded following the tearing up of the rails.

The length of the street on which the tracks are laid is one and four-tenths miles.

Johnson Miller, secretary, testified that no arrangements had been made with the borough by the defendant to repair the street.

Another witness, Walter L. Dilliplane, also a member of Council, explained that the tearing up of the tracks by the defendant without repairing proved a dangerous condition. "They tear the tracks out and throw the stones back and that is all they will do," he said.

Philip Werner, a member of the Philadelphia Bar, who is the counsel for the defendant, argued that there is adequate remedy at law against the railroad company. He contended that the borough can repair the street and recover damages from the railway company.

Mr. VanArtsdalen argued that it is a question whether the borough has a right to spend the taxpayers' funds, and that the borough is satisfied it cannot recover damages from the railroad company. He also explained that no satisfactory arrangement had been made with the State concerning the matter.

The Court decided to continue the hearing and in the meantime a brief may be filed by the defendant's counsel.

Upon the payment of costs, two divorces were granted in the Court of Common Pleas by Judge Boyer. They are Charles Lawrence Arment from Cecile C. Arment and Harold Tichenor Green from Elizabeth Tatlock Green.

WAR DEBTS

Once again the United States sends polite notes to its European debtors—"How about paying a little something on account?" Of course, it is a mere matter of form. Nothing is expected, save from Finland. Twelve of the leading nations of Europe will lightly toss the request notes into the wastepaper basket. Finland will pay.

The 12 are too busy making war preparations. The debts are war debts.

Several of the nations made a pretense of paying by what are called token payments up to December of last year. The payments didn't amount to much in cash, but they were an acknowledgment that the debt remained in force.

Then the United States by an act of congress made the sensible rule that any government owing the American nation debts which were past due, could not sell securities in this country. There is nothing particularly novel about refusing to loan more money to a debtor who defaults. That is just good business.

But these war debtors quit paying as if in retaliation. With no prospect of future borrowings, they lost interest in paying debts.

Anyway, they need the money to get ready for the next war. They are boosting budgets; buying unprecedented quantities of war machines and war materials. Each tries to outdo all the others in heights of extravagance and in hostile demonstrations. And they get the money for this wasteful and perilous foolishness.

These facts should be kept clearly in mind if another war begins. Our statements of account on June 15 will be ignored. There should be no question of further credit if Europe again indulges in the luxury of war.

TEMPERANCE

Says one of the largest whisky distillers on the continent, in a newspaper advertisement:

"Liquor has no place in the front seat of an automobile. Alcohol and gasoline do not mix. These statements may seem to work directly against our self-interest. But actually they do not. It is very much to our self-interest to see that the privilege of drinking is not abused. It is to our interest to see that liquor is consumed as it should be consumed. Whisky is a luxury and should be treated as such. It should be taken in moderation—and only in the proper place."

This distiller strikes a note which all factors in the industry could profitably adopt and sustain in their outgivings to the public and in the conduct of their enterprises. It was the industry's misfortune that the same enlightened self-interest was not its notable characteristic prior to prohibition. The indiscriminate pushing of alcohol with high-pressure methods was a persuasive talking point of those who placed prohibition in the statutes.

The intelligence of the new industry is measured by the degree to which it commits itself to that mean between unbridled consumption to drink and complete prohibition which is the goal of the civilized citizen—the same being temperance.

The Skeptics Society, at its next regular meeting, will compare a painless tax with painless dentistry, to see which is the more excruciating.

Mutual Insurance

is older than the nation. In 1752 under the leadership of Benjamin Franklin, a number of colonists met in the Court House of Philadelphia and organized the first Insurance Company of America—a Company that exists, sturdy and successful, today. From these beginnings has grown the great Mutual structure of today. The fundamental principles have never changed; they have stood the acid test of time—a satisfying knowledge to the Mutual policyholder.

The retirement record of Insurance Companies of United States as of March 15, 1935, shows that 58.2% of all the Mutual Companies organized in the U. S. are still in business, while the next highest record of any other form of insurance is 24.5%.

WHOSE WIFE? A CYRUS K. MANTEL MURDER MYSTERY

by CLADYS SHAW ERSKINE AND IVAN FIRTH

CHAPTER XIX

Betty shook the spell of the crooning voice off with an effort.

"Snap out of it, Suky," she said. "Let's get back to everyday things. Come on now, forget all that voodoo of yours."

"I can't forget voodoo, Miss Betty, 'cause voodoo can't forget me," said the old Negress with a dignity and a queer fatalism.

"Well, anyway," Betty was nervous. "You can't get out of answering my questions that way. Come on, now. You have been calling up someone on the phone, haven't you?"

"No, Miss Betty, I haven't. Someone called me heath."

"What do you mean, someone called you here? Who could have done that? You've got no friends here."

"It were your uncle Mr. Cyrus that called me, Miss Betty."

"What?" Betty almost shrieked the word.

"Yes, Miss Betty—and what's more, he come up heath to see old Suky."

"Well, for heaven's sake," Betty sat down on the edge of the bed.

"That's a great note—so Uncle Cyrus came up here to see you. I suppose he wanted to pump you as to my friends, and my comings and goings, did he?"

"No, Miss Betty," Suky was mild. "He never asked me a thing about you at all."

"Well then, for goodness sake what did he come for?"

"He wanted to know something about Mr. Wilbur Renton," said Suky quietly.

Betty stared at her old black maid as though she had never seen her before. She could scarcely credit her own ears with the news which they had just heard and were asked to believe.

"What on earth could you tell him about Mr. Renton, Suky?" she asked simply. "What do you know about him anyway?"

"I knows plenty Miss Betty." And Suky picked up a frock that was to be pressed, and quietly walked from the room.

The rest of that morning had gone badly for Betty. She had puzzled over the strange attitude of Suky and the startling news that she had divulged. At the newspaper office, the city editor had been like a bear with a sore head, and had become sarcastic in asking her whether she thought the paper was paying her just for her looks. She had turned out a sob story on a lost child, which looked maudlin in her print, and had revamped a tragic tale of a fire and the homeless families. Then she had put on her close-fitting little turban, and had gone out to lunch, refusing the usual couple of invitations shouted at her across the room from beneath green eye-shades set at an angle. She felt that she couldn't eat a thing if she had to sit across the table from anyone who gathered news as a business in life—her idea of a perfect escort, at the moment, would have been a deaf mute.

She walked to a favorite little hide-away restaurant, and forced a smile for the bowing headwaiter. At her request he placed her at a small table for two, in an inconspicuous spot. She ordered, and sat thinking and staring into space.

A fat jolly voice brought her back to herself.

"Hello, hello, hello," it chorled. "If it isn't Betty the Bee-utiful Newspaper Gal—in person!"

Without looking up she knew who belonged to that voice, and weakly she answered it.

"Hello, Bobbie," she said. "How are you?"

"Well, well, well," he said, and appropriated the extra chair at her table. "How've you been?"

Betty's mind worked quickly. She knew perfectly well that Bobbie Nichols the gossip gatherer, the talker par excellence did not like her—and with reason! She knew that ever since she had slapped his face for an uncalculated rudeness on his part, Nichols had hated her, had called her "that red-headed vixen," and had been set to get her into trouble in any way he could.

Her quick brain told her that this seeming friendliness on his part must be assumed, that he had something he wanted to tell, and that it would probably be something that she would rather not hear—hence his eagerness to tell it.

"Hello, Bobbie," she repeated, and smiled at him her most bewitching smile. "What do you know?"

"Oh! This and that," he laughed. "I hear you're on the Vano murder case—kind of a boost and a kick for you, eh?"

"What do you mean?" Betty managed to keep her smile.

"Well, a boost from the paper angle, and a kick from the social! Bobby was pleased with himself.

"Oh... I don't know," she tried to sound casual, while her hand

He paused to receive the steak, to look it over with meticulous care to serve himself, to take a bite and relish it—and then, but not till then, continued deliberately:

"Well. At this little old drug store I got to talking to the quaintest old bird—the chemist he said he was, near-sighted as an owl in the sun—and he begins on the Vano case."

"No!" she gasped. "What did he say?"

"By Golly," he said. "Plenty. It seems that he had sold a bottle of veronal to Vane a few nights before the murder—told me all about it, he did—awfully pleased that the great artist had stopped to talk to him

"The quaintest old bird said he had sold a bottle of sleep medicine to Vane," narrated Bobbie Nichols.

itched to repeat the slap she had given him once before.

"I heard a great one last night," Bobby leaned forward in the favorite attitude of the scandal-monger.

"Well, go on. Tell it, kind sir, tell it," Betty had herself as she catered to his self love, but she felt that she must do it under these strange circumstances. For she was a news-hound on the scent.

"What'll you give to know?" Bobbie leered at her across the little table.

"I'll stake you to a beef-steak dinner," she laughed at him, in apparent camaraderie.

"Done!" he cried. "For a beef-steak Bobbie will tell all!"

As the waiter left after the new order had been placed, Betty could not resist leaning forward with unconcealed eagerness.

"Come on, Bobbie," she begged. "Come across. What do you know?"

"Interest of the Newspaper Gal—or of Betty the Daring Debutante?" Bobbie's sneer was not well hidden.

Betty flushed, clear up to her red hair. Then controlled her temper, and managed to say:

"Newspaper Gal, darling. I'm out for news, with a capital N."

"Okay, Kid! Bobbie's the man to give it to you—and how!" His intention was plain, and Betty winced as she waited for the news this slimy seeker after hidden things would gladly give her.

"Go ahead," she said bravely. "I'm doing to hear, Bobbie."

"Well," he mouthed the words with relish. "I was down in the Village the other night at a wov of a party, and the good old host ran out of what it takes, so he and I went over to a little drug store to get the wherewithal. And—" her wide-eyed, and paused dramatically.

and had told him his name, Lawrence Vane. And here's the pay-off! The old guy was worried as to whether he ought to go to the police with what he knew."

"What did you tell him, Bobbie?" Betty was tense.

"I told him to use his own judgment," Bobbie laughed. "That's safe enough—I don't think the old ape's got any!"

"Bobbie, are you sure—did he say he was sure—it was Lawrence Vane that bought it?"

"Sure!" said Bobbie cheerfully. Betty rose hurriedly.

"I must go," she said. "Thank for telling me—I'll settle for you on the way out," she managed a smile. "You know I'm a newspaper woman," she told him, "and news comes first."

Conflict started in the mind of Betty such as never before had been experienced by her. What to do? Newspaper woman—or just a woman? What to do?

She walked rapidly, unseeing down the Avenue, fighting it out within herself. At last she turned into a shop, and went directly to the public telephone. After all, news was her business in life.

Her face was set as she put in her nickel and gave the number of her office to report to the city desk.

As she waited, she realized to the full just what this would mean, not only to her paper, but—to the man she loved. To the paper it would mean money; to him it would mean further tragedy and sorrow. Duty on the one side, love on the other. Her path lay clear. The voice of her city editor answered her.

"Hello!" she said. "This is Betty Potter—on the Vano case. I've been on all the morning... and I haven't heard a thing."

HULMEVILLE INCREASES LEAD TO FULL GAME

ST. ANN'S EARLY HITTING TRIMS THE EDGELY IX.

St. Ann's A. A. did all their hitting in the early part of the contest last night on the Edgely field, trimming the Edgely A. C., 7-4, in a Bristol Twilight League contest. The Saints made twelve safe blows while the losing aggregation had six. Nicolls and Angelo had one-half of the winners' safe hits.

Edgely threw a great scare into the St. Ann's team in the last frame by filling the sacks with one out and the slugging part of the batting order coming to the plate. But Al Piazza pulled through with only one run being scored.

PETERSON BUILDS ACE SWIM AT WESTERN

CLEVELAND, June 12—(INS)—Despite the fact that every member of the team except one is a sophomore, Western Reserve University's swimming team ranks with the best in the Midwest.

The Reserve natators have shattered all varsity team swimming records and have also set up new pool standards against their competitors.

It was not until six years ago that Reserve had a varsity swimming team, and until this year, Coach Larry Peterson, who had to develop his teams with material having no high school experience, met with little success at Cleveland's largest college.

Included among the victims of the Reserve natators this season are Carnegie Tech, Wayne University, Ohio Wesleyan, Oberlin and Case. Michigan State, which always turns out a powerful water squad, was tied, and it was in this meet that the local mermen made their best showing.

Ed Wolpaw, star of the team, is a former Shaw high school ace who first broke into the national spotlight when he was chosen as a member of the All-American scholastic swim team two years ago. He hasn't been beaten yet this year and now holds all the varsity free-style and breast-stroke records.

Jimmy Troughton, another sophomore, and former Cleveland Heights swimming captain, has garnered many points for Reserve in the 100 and 150-yard races. He was a winner of a National A. A. U. Jr. backstroke title last year. He also is undefeated.

The other members of the team are Harry L. Davis, Jr., son of Cleveland's mayor and former governor of Ohio, Carl Moran, former captain of the Y Prep state championship team in 1931, and Bob Kenan, also a former high school captain. The latter is a junior, the rest sophomores.

Among the records hung up by the Reserve team this year was the shattering of the pool record in the Michigan State meet at that city. The trio of Carl Moran, Wolpaw and Kenan covered the 150-yard medley relay distance in 1:47.9.

The 1935 swimming team at Reserve promises to be even better than the present one. Included in the list of promising freshmen coming up are Jack Gorman, an All-American scholastic swimmer who recently transferred from Ohio State, and Roland Wolfe, who won the Olympic tumbling championship at Los Angeles in 1932 and is now a student at Reserve. Wolfe is being groomed for a diving position.

Peterson, the coach, holds a unique position regarding the destinies of Western Reserve swimming. For the veteran swimming instructor and athletic director at the Central Y. M. C. A. is also a student at Reserve. He graduates in 1936.

J. A. C. WINS THIRD STRAIGHT IN LEAGUE

By Louis Tomlinson

Yesterday on Leedom's Field J. A. C. took over the revised and improved Catholic Boys' Club, 5-4, to remain undefeated and at the same time held on to first place, through their victory.

The Catholic Boys gave the "Mules" a scare in the last inning when they tallied four times and had the tying runner on base, but Phillips flied out to end the game.

Jimmie Rue did the twirling for the "Jeffs" and held the Radcliffe street boys well in hand, the first six innings, during which time he allowed but three hits, struck out eight and passed only one batter. But in the seventh Mulligan's boys slammed out three hits behind a walk, fielder's choice and an error that accounted for the losers scoring for the day.

Seven Years Ago Today—

Although held to two hits, the St. Ann's team nosed out the Field Club, 2-1, on St. Ann's field. The Field Club made three bingles, two of which went to "Bill" Fine, who also did the hurling. The "Saints" scored a tally in the first when "Chickie" Fields walked, and came in on a double by "Edlie" Roe. The second tally came in the third. Tullio walked and stole second. He went to third on a fielder's choice, but was trapped and put out at the plate when Oriola hit to Fine. Oriola went to second on the play. A wild throw by "Chetty" Beaton on Roe's roller scored Oriola. An error by Oriola and a double by Fine scored the Field Club run. Fine struck out seven batters in the five-inning contest.

WHYNO AIDS A. A. IN WIN WITH A TRIPLE

"Charlie" Whyno helped his own cause last night on the Newportville field by slamming a triple to left with two runners on base as the Bristol A. A. team chalked up another victory. Final tabulations were: Bristol, 5; Newportville, 3.

It was the eighth defeat of the season for the Newporters who outfit the A. A., 5-4. The only player to collect two hits in the fray was Langon who had a double and single.

LEGION TEAM TONIGHT PLAYS NEWTOWN HERE

Tonight on Leedom's field, Bob Hem's American Legion team goes into action against Newtown, last year's champions of Bucks County. The locals will be seeking their third straight victory tonight and should they succeed they will remain at the top of the ladder.

The same team that defeated both Quakertown and Langhorne will start with either "Al" Capriotti or Tommy Muffett on the hill.

Bristol is still unscored upon in two games, having won both starts by 3-0. This week will probably tell Manager Hens his chances for the title as they go into action against Doylestown at Edgely on Friday and travel to Perkasee on Saturday to wind up the first round. Should they come out on top in each of these games they stand an excellent chance of taking the pennant this year.

Tonight's game will start at 6.15.

SAM JONES GIVES SECRET OF MOUND SUCCESS

BOSTON — (INS) — Sam Jones, 42-year-old Chicago White Sox hurler, credits his continued success in the big leagues to the fact that he never makes a throw to catch a runner off the bag.

"It's just a waste of energy, and old Sam is saving all that for the fellow at the plate," he stated.

HIBOS PRESENT A NEW LINE-UP, BUT LOSE TILT

Manager Marty Fallon, of the Hibos, presented a revamped line-up to the Bristol Twilight League fans last night on Leedom's field but the club lacked hitting power as "Charlie" Wright held them to four hits in giving Jefferson an easy 4-1 victory.

Wright had the Hibos popping up or grounding out all night. He did not fan a batter and issued two passes and hit a batsman. "Tommy" Stake who did the hurling for the losing club was found for seven safe blows. Stake and Clay were the former Tullytown batteries.

Religious Services Held During War Games

through the waves the chaplain led his hearty congregation in an opening hymn and The Lord's Prayer. The men all sang, their voices floating over the ocean, and recited the invocation.

Chaplain Williams preached a short but vigorous sermon on Christ's denunciation of hypocrisy in the temple, the service closed with the song, "America," and a prayer "for the safe cruise of this fleet and the health and welfare of those we hold dear who wait for us."

Three hundred vowed heads were raised, the battleships put on speed, the destroyers started their zig-zagging submarine practice again, patrol planes shot into the air from the carriers and the weekly interval of peace and quiet for the fleet had passed.

She calls it a Cook's Tour

NOBODY, thought Katherine would make a very good wife. She seemed too frivolous. Always made a game out of everything. Hadn't a practical thought in her head—so it seemed.

Maybe that's why she does make Ed such a good wife. You still wouldn't think she was serious about a thing. Yet she must be. Because you've never seen a house kept better in your life. Or a budget balanced more neatly.

Most women come home from shopping all tired out. Not Katherine! She makes a grand game of it... calls it her weekly "Cook's Tour." She pores over her newspaper like a travel map... charts a course that takes her to bargain ports... and gets there without one wasted step.

How? She follows the advertisements. Watches them as closely as a sailor watches his compass. And she gets fun out of it all... But who wouldn't, with a happy home like hers and her knack for saving up money!
